

Hi I am Deandre Johns. I go to Kenosha St. Joseph Catholic Academy.

I just got done beating Nick Van Excel's all-time scoring record for the school.

Just to be in the same category, as like, he is not just in Kenosha, and just Wisconsin, it's the whole country to be honest.

He got to play with Kobe and Shaq (NBA L.A. Lakers). What are you going to say?

It really has not hit me yet. I am pretty sure, when I go home and think about it, it is honestly a pleasure.

My earliest memory for basketball has to be about, when I was seven or eight, it's like fourth grade, when I first met my personal trainer Jacorie Benjamin.

He also trained my cousin, who was here last here year, Matthew Brown.

To have parents that are the same page as me, yeah, because my dad, he is not a basketball player, at all, right. He scored two points his whole middle-school career. He did not even play in high-school.

Mom, she played in high-school, she was all right.

Grandma, no. Grandpa, no.

So, it literally me and Matthew.

My dad was a football player and a wrestler.

You see I am pretty big. That's all natural.

My favorite memory in basketball, sixth grade, I hit my first game winning three.

It was around this time, Christmas.

I remember running around all day singing the Christmas carol like, for the first day of Christmas.

And like the tenth one was a game winning Michael Jordon three. I sang that for about a week.

My role model would have to be my dad because regardless of what happens in his life, he stays positive.

Cherishing the time I have with him, because I do not get to see him that much.

I look up to him because he always stays positive. He taught me to stay positive.

I literally eat cereal and milk all day.

There will be days where I will eat nothing be cereal.

I would have like four bowls a day.

I am still growing.

I am 6'3".

I am not suppose to be 6'3". My dad is 5'10" and my mom is 5'4".

It's the milk. I tell you. It's the cereal and milk.

That is all you need. Cereal and milk.

Hi I am Deandre Johns. I go to Kenosha St. Joseph Catholic Academy and I play basketball.

I am this week's Fox6 high-school hotshot. (12.11.16).